Everyone Has a Story...

and local author Margo Wilson enjoys writing about them.

Whether it's telling the stories of retired veterans, or of a woman who paddled her kayak around the Florida peninsula, for Nature Coast writer and author Margo Wilson, each person she meets has a tale worth sharing.

Margo worked as a reporter and editor at newspapers ranging from the Spruce Grove Star in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, to the Los Angeles Times. She also taught journalism, English, and creative writing at California University of Pennsylvania, where she chaired the English Department.

Today, she freelances for the Citrus County Chronicle, after years as a newspaper reporter and editor across the United States and Canada. The author of the novel, "The Main Ingredient," Margo is completing a musical about her late friend, a Native American singer/songwriter. Margo has also published creative nonfiction works.

She teaches writing classes at Rainbow Springs Art in Dunnellon, where she also volunteers on occasion. Visit her website to learn more: www.margowilson.com, or email her at margokwilson@yahoo.com.

About Margo's Book:

What does it mean to love?

Can death be defied?

Will people pay good money for your Friday night fish fry?

These are some of the mysteries facing West Coast food editor Wendy Whitby, when she reluctantly returns to her childhood home in Weewampum, Wisconsin, to await the demise of her cantankerous and terminally ill mother.

But mom has other plans. As days turn into months, Wendy helps two high school pals who've opened a restaurant. After the eatery burns down, the women are suspected of torching the place to collect the insurance money. Eventually, the women must solve the restaurant mystery, and calculate the cost of family, friends, and a plate of lake perch.
